

My experience moving into High School

It was the last day of primary school I was very happy to be going into the summer holidays, although I was quite nervous because I knew that after the summer holidays were finished, I would be moving into secondary school. There was a lot of different emotions I was feeling moving into High School, my main worry was who I was going to be in classes with. I was hoping that I would be with my friends. After my induction days I had the experience of the different classes, but I also found out what classes I was in and I was a bit scared because I knew that I was in no classes with my friends however little did I know this would turn out to be one of the best things for me.

Summer was over, and the first day of High School was here. As I was walking into the school, I was a little bit overwhelmed with how many people there were and how big the school was. I was thinking to myself there was no way that I would be able to find my way about. Luckily, I had my timetable and the older pupils also helped me find my way. Once I entered my first class most of the teachers let us choose where to sit. All the teachers were very welcoming and nice. I was surprised at myself at how quick I made new friends. I was not as nervous after I found out how easy it was to talk to other people. After my first day of high school I was much more confident and was not too nervous. I didn't think I would enjoy high school as much as I do. I really like how you are always moving about to different classes, so you can't really get bored.

High School is definitely something everyone should look forward to. From my experience I would say that you will enjoy High School better than primary. I think this because...

- if you don't like a class then your only in there for fifty minutes
- You're always moving about,
- there are so many different teachers
- there are a lot more opportunities. This allows you meet so many new people and make a lot of new friends
- there are a lot more options of food/drink for lunch
- there is so much more space
- it is just overall so much fun.

I hope this has helped you and made you feel better about moving into secondary school. Good luck.
